➤ ORIGIN AND CONTENTS OF THIS DIRECTORY

In 1999, as recommended by the Report of the Task Force on Violence Against Women (1997), the Eastern Regional Planning Committee on Violence Against Women began an assessment of existing services and needs in the eastern region (counties Dublin, Kildare and Wicklow) with regard to women who experience violence. A Mapping Sub-Committee of the Eastern Regional Planning Committee was appointed to oversee the Project. Phase One of this task involved the identification and mapping of statutory, voluntary and community-based services located in the eastern region of the country that are currently responding, in a number of diverse ways, to women who experience violence. The culmination of Phase One was this:

The Directory of Eastern Regional Service Provision for Women Who Experience Violence.

The Mapping Sub-Committee has had many difficult decisions to make with regard to the content of this Directory. We have adopted what we feel has been the most logical approach to deciding exactly what services should be included in a Directory of this nature. In selecting the services included herein, the Mapping Sub-Committee has been directed by the following:

- Firstly, previous Irish research on the issue of violence against women in intimate relationships with men, carried out by Kelleher Associates and O'Connor (Making The Links, 1995); which documents those individuals/agencies to which Irish women most commonly disclose violence committed against them (see Table in Appendix A).
- Secondly, information provided by the Dublin Rape Crisis Centre on the disclosure patterns and service requirements of survivors of rape and sexual assault. In light of this information a section on recommended Counselling Services has been included in order to reflect the needs of survivors of rape and sexual assault.

In using these guides, we recognise that domestic violence and rape and sexual assault are not necessarily separate disjointed experiences in women's lives – many women experience a number of different forms of violence at any one time. It is hoped that the content of this directory reflects the reality of violence against women in Ireland in all of its manifestations.

➤ DIRECTORY DISCLAIMER:

All efforts have been made to ensure that the information contained within this Directory is accurate at the time of going to print. Where this is not the case an ‘Invitation to Contribute’ form has been included on page 116, which can be used to inform the Eastern Regional Planning Committee on Violence Against Women of any changes or corrections that may need to be made in future editions of this Directory.

Please note also, that this is the third edition of the Directory. We do not claim that it contains an exhaustive listing of all services and organisations in the eastern region that are responding to the issue of violence against women. The Committee is aware that there is work on this issue, taking place at a local level, which may not have been included in this publication. Nevertheless, every attempt has been made to ensure that this is an inclusive document – any omissions that have been made are not intentional and may be indicative of the limited amount of time that was available to complete this work.

If information about your service’s response to women who experience violence has not been included here, please give your attention to the aforementioned ‘Invitation to Contribute’ form on page 122, which you may complete if you wish your service to be considered for inclusion in future editions of the Directory.

➤ HOW TO USE THIS DIRECTORY:

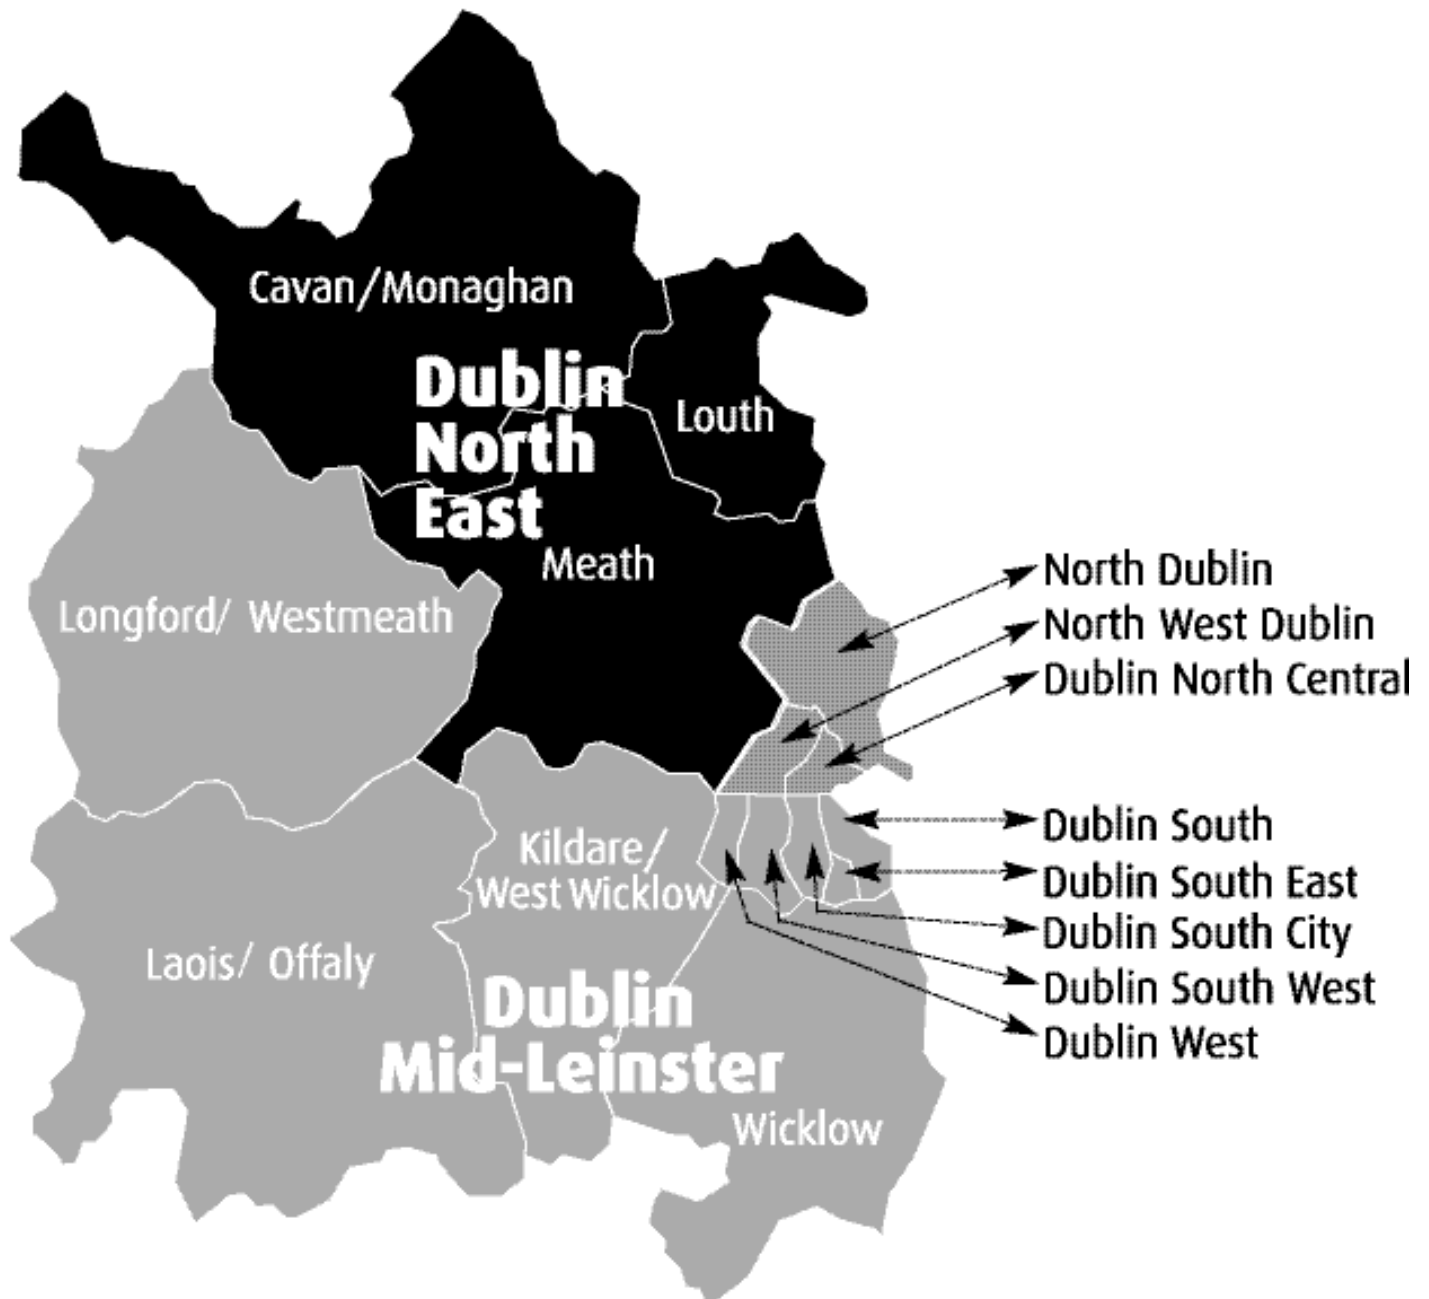

The publication of the latest edition of the Directory (formerly the Directory of Eastern Regional Service Provision for Women Who Experience Violence) comes at a time of major development and change in the eastern region. In March 1st 2000, the Eastern Health Board was dissolved and this area known as the eastern region was divided into three ‘Area Health Boards’ – the East Coast Area Health Board, the Northern Area Health Board, and the South Western Area Health Board – each of which had the responsibility to deliver within their own areas the services previously provided by the Eastern Health Board.

In January 2005, there was a further major change, as the Health Service Executive came into being. At time of going to print (2007), the former Health Boards continue to provide services to their regional areas, but boundaries are changing to North and South of the River Liffey and this will impact on service provision.

In recognition of these important organisational changes, The Directory of Eastern Regional Service Provision for Women Who Experience Violence has been divided into sections as follows:

Section 1:	Direct/Frontline Services for women who experience violence – providing for the Dublin region (north and south of the Liffey) and surrounding areas	White Pages (11-30)
Section 2:	Health Services, Garda and Legal Services, Housing and Accommodation Services – which can be accessed by women who experience violence in the Dublin region (north of the Liffey)	Green Pages (33-60)
Section 3:	Health Services, Garda and Legal Services, Housing and Accommodation Services – which can be accessed by women who experience violence in the Dublin region (south of the Liffey)	Purple Pages (65-96)
Section 4:	Counselling Services for survivors of sexual and other forms of violence– providing for all of the Dublin region (north and south of the Liffey) and surrounding areas	Blue Pages (101-104)
Section 5:	Further Voluntary and Community-Based Responses to the issue of Violence Against Women in the Dublin region (north and south of the Liffey) and surrounding areas	White Pages (105-112)
Section 6:	Services for Refugees and Asylum Seekers in the Dublin region (north and south of the Liffey) and surrounding areas	White Pages (115-117)
Section 7:	Services for male perpetrators of violence against women in the Dublin region (north and south of the Liffey) and surrounding areas	White Pages (119-120)

Definition of a ‘Direct/Frontline Service’:

There is however, one exception - The Homeless Persons Unit - which has been included in this section because of its importance to women who are forced to leave their homes because of violence.

➤ COMMUNITY SERVICES:

It is evident from Irish research findings (see Appendix A) that a small percentage of women first disclose the violence they have experienced to a member of Social Services.

In a Community Services context, a general description is given below of some of the key social services provided by members of the Community Services team.

The Community Welfare Officer:

The chief role of the Community Welfare Service is to provide income maintenance for families in need and to alleviate financial stress. The Community Welfare Officer is of particular importance to women who experience financial exclusion, or who are out of home as a result of violence.

Services provided include the following:

Supplementary Welfare Allowance; Supplements; Exceptional Needs Payments; Urgent Needs Payments; Back to School Clothing & Footwear Scheme; National Fuel Scheme; Funeral Arrangements and Accommodation Placement.

Advice is given to clients in relation to household budgeting, and Community Welfare Officers also act as advocates for clients with debtor agencies. Referrals may be made to other appropriate agencies. Information is given relating to other health and welfare services that can be availed of.

It should be noted that clients have the right to appeal decisions made about their case by a Community Welfare Officer (see Customer Service Department information on page 34).

The Public Health Nurse:

Public Health Nursing care services are provided to individuals, families, groups and the community at large. Although their main area of work is with children, Public Health Nurses have an interest in women's health, and as one of the few health professionals who work within the home, may be in a position to recognise and respond to the symptoms of violence in a family.

Services provided include the following:

Preventative services such as Health Education; Child and Adult Screening and Health Checks; Advice on Immunisation; Developmental Monitoring of infants and children; School Health Services; Domiciliary Nursing Care and Services for Older Persons.

The Social Worker in a Community Services Setting:

The Social Work service provides information, support and advice to both families and individuals, primarily in relation to the welfare of children. However, Social Workers may also be able to provide information and support to women who experience violence, and refer them to other appropriate agencies and services.

Services provided include the following:

Assessment of Child Protection matters; Counselling; Individual and Family Therapy; Fostering and Adoption Assessment; Advocacy; and Support and Counselling for young people who are out of home.

The Duty Social Work Service provides an Emergency Social Work Service to anyone who requires it, and operates during certain designated hours which vary from area to area (see Community Services Area contact details below)

➤ GARDA SERVICES:

Irish research has shown that a significant proportion of women who experience violence report their abuse to the Garda Síochána (see Research Findings, Appendix A).

Domestic violence is a crime, and is treated as such by the Garda Síochána. The perpetrator of such violence can be arrested and charged by the Gardaí under the Non-Fatal Offences Against the Person Act, 1997. In cases where there is a breach of a Court Order (a Barring, Protection, Safety or Interim Barring order), the perpetrator can be arrested without a warrant and criminally prosecuted. In 1994 the Garda Síochána Policy on Domestic Violence Intervention was introduced (amended in 1997 – for details see Report of the Task Force on Violence Against Women, April 1997). If you are subjected to violence of any kind, you can contact the Garda Síochána for immediate help. The Garda Síochána is committed to a proactive policy in relation to protection through law enforcement (Garda Síochána Community Relations Section).

The Garda Síochána treats rape, sexual assault and other sexual offences as serious crimes. The laws governing such criminal offences are detailed in ‘The Legal Process and the Victims of Rape’ (The Dublin Rape Crisis Centre and The School of Law Trinity College, 1998). The Dublin Rape Crisis Centre provides support for survivors of sexual crime throughout the legal and court process (for further details see entry under Direct/Frontline Services).

If you are experiencing violence of any kind Gardaí can give you immediate protection, advice, and referral to other appropriate agencies. If you choose, a female Garda can be available to help and support you throughout this experience (Garda Síochána Community Relations Section). The Garda Síochána can be contacted at your local Garda station or District Garda station – 24 hours a day, 365 days a year:

Contact: 999 or alternatively 112.

The Garda Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Investigation Unit:

In 1993, a special unit, the Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Investigation Unit, was set up to oversee all cases of domestic violence and sexual assault in the Dublin Metropolitan Area. In 1997, the Investigation Unit was placed under the responsibility of the National Bureau of Criminal Investigation, giving it a countrywide brief.

The objectives of the Unit are:

- To overview all cases of domestic violence and sexual violence/assault, and to assist where necessary in the investigation of the more complex cases;
- To improve methods of investigation by training, advice and assistance;
- To liaise with statutory and non-statutory bodies and organisations which have a brief for sexual assault and domestic violence; and
- To make arrangements to perform its duties in tandem with Community Relations Section and Juvenile Liaison Officer personnel.

Because of the National nature of the Unit, the types of cases that get its attention are those national or international issues that relate to sexually related crimes and domestic violence. The Unit is directly involved only in the investigation of those cases to which special circumstances apply. All other cases are dealt with by personnel at the complainant's local Garda station.

To access the Unit:

Dublin 2.

Contact: By referral only through the complainant's local Garda station, where appropriate.

➤ LEGAL ADVICE AND LEGAL AID (REPRESENTATION) SERVICES:

Women experiencing violence may seek legal support (see Research Findings, Appendix A). This support can range from the provision of general information and advice on a woman's legal options, to the hiring of a solicitor and the presentation of her case in a District Court.

A number of the Direct/Frontline Services can provide legal information, and support women experiencing violence through both the legal and court process (for further information see the Direct/Frontline Services Section).

Legal Advice:

The following non-statutory services provide legal advice and general legal information on a wide variety of matters, including Family Law, although they do not operate a Legal Aid service. If you do require legal representation (a solicitor or barrister), you will be referred to Legal Aid services (see below for further details).

The Legal Aid Board is a statutory body that provides legal aid and advice in civil cases to persons of moderate means/income. The Board makes the services of solicitors and, if necessary, barristers available to the above persons at a cost related to their income. Clients are means-tested, and in the majority of cases the contribution payable is a minimum contribution. To apply for legal aid and to find out if you are eligible to access this service, contact any of the Board's law centres, details of which are set out below, or contact the Board's Head Office at Quay Street, Cahirciveen, Co. The Board provides its services through law centres and it also operates a scheme whereby applicants, who require remedies in the District Court for domestic violence, maintenance and/or custody/access, may be referred to a private solicitor to be chosen from a specially designated Legal Aid Board panel. An application for an Order must already have been made to the District Court before a client can access this Private Practitioner service. This service can be accessed via:

Private Practitioner Centre

Montague Court

The law centres also operate a priority system for urgent cases. ➤ DISTRICT COURTS SERVICE:

Under the Domestic Violence Act, 1996 a woman who is experiencing violence can obtain any one of the following Court Orders in order to protect herself and her children from her abuser:

- A Protection Order
- A Safety Order
- A Barring Order
- An Interim Barring Order

The above Court Orders, as well as Custody/Access Orders and Maintenance Orders fall under the auspices of Family Law, and all applications for these Orders are held in camera (privately) in local District Courts.

A woman intending to obtain any of the above Orders can make an application directly to the District Court herself. However, it is recommended that legal advice, and if possible legal representation, is sought before presenting at Court.

Any woman wishing to take her case to Court should contact the Court Clerk in the District Court in her area. Please note that, in most District Courts, Family Law proceedings are only dealt with at specific times, or on specific dates. An exception to this is the court service provided at Dolphin House, which operates specially designated Family Law Courts from Monday to Friday. Please see the Court details provided below.

For further information on the Domestic Violence Act, 1996 and the Court Orders referred to above, see Appendix B.

Please note: Legal proceedings for Separation and Divorce take place at Circuit Court level where legal representation is required.

Rape and Aggravated Sexual Assault Offences are only dealt with in the Central Criminal Court in Dublin where the woman concerned acts as a witness in her own case. The Dublin Rape Crisis Centre can provide legal information, and support women through both the legal and court process.

Breaches of Barring, Protection, Safety and Interim Barring orders are also dealt with in the Criminal Court.

District Court Sittings and Vacations:

Sittings of the District Court are not held during the month of August; however, a judge is available during this time to hear “matters of sufficient urgency”, including domestic violence cases.

➤ PROBATION SERVICE:

The Probation Service provides a probation work and related service to the courts. The work involves:

- Carrying out pre-sanction assessments for the courts;
- Supervising offenders in the community who are referred by the court;
- Supervising offenders under community service orders;
- Supervising offenders released conditionally from custody;
- Providing a counselling service to offenders and their families.

In working with offenders who have been convicted of crimes of violence against women, the service's intervention will focus on changing behaviour in a way that does not compromise the victim, and reduces the likelihood of further victimisation, while at all times holding the perpetrator accountable to the courts. In addition, this service is aware, from its assessment of offenders in general, that a propensity to or acts of violence against women can be a significant factor within the pattern of offending. Counselling which includes inputs on addiction, heightening personal responsibility for offending, and addressing the management of anger seeks to reduce the dangers to women and the likelihood of further offending.

Probation Officers are assigned to work in designated areas within the regions of the service. Probation Officers can be contacted as follows:

➤ COMMUNITY SERVICES:

It is evident from Irish research findings (see Appendix A) that a small percentage of women first disclose the violence they have experienced to a member of Social Services.

In a Community Services context, a general description is given below of some of the key social services provided by members of the Community Services team.

The Community Welfare Officer:

The chief role of the Community Welfare Service is to provide income maintenance for families in need and to alleviate financial stress. The Community Welfare Officer is of particular importance to women who experience financial exclusion, or who are out of home as a result of violence.

Services provided include the following:

Supplementary Welfare Allowance; Supplements; Exceptional Needs Payments; Urgent Needs Payments; Back to School Clothing & Footwear Scheme; National Fuel Scheme; Funeral Arrangements and Accommodation Placement.

Advice is given to clients in relation to household budgeting, and Community Welfare Officers also act as advocates for clients with debtor agencies. Referrals may be made to other appropriate agencies. Information is given relating to other health and welfare services that can be availed of.

It should be noted that clients have the right to appeal decisions made about their case by a Community Welfare Officer (see Customer Service Department information on page 66).

The Public Health Nurse:

Public Health Nursing care services are provided to individuals, families, groups and the community at large. Although their main area of work is with children, Public Health Nurses have an interest in women's health, and as one of the few health professionals who work within the home, may be in a position to recognise and respond to the symptoms of violence in a family.

Services provided include the following:

Preventative services such as Health Education; Child and Adult Screening and Health Checks; Advice on Immunisation; Developmental Monitoring of infants and children; School Health Services; Domiciliary Nursing Care and Services for Older Persons.

The Social Worker in a Community Services Setting:

The Social Work service provides information, support and advice to both families and individuals, primarily in relation to the welfare of children. However, Social Workers may also be able to provide information and support to women who experience violence, and refer them to other appropriate agencies and services.

Services provided include the following:

Assessment of Child Protection matters; Counselling; Individual and Family Therapy; Fostering and Adoption Assessment; Advocacy; and Support and Counselling for young people who are out of home.

The Duty Social Work Service provides an Emergency Social Work Service to anyone who requires it, and operates during certain designated hours which vary from area to area (see Community Care Area contact details below)

Community Services Personnel can be accessed via:

c) the Community Services Area Main Office;

OR

d) locally-based Health Centres/Clinics.

➤ GARDA SERVICES:

Irish research has shown that a significant proportion of women who experience violence report their abuse to the Garda Síochána (see Research Findings, Appendix A).

Domestic violence is a crime, and is treated as such by the Garda Síochána. The perpetrator of such violence can be arrested and charged by the Gardaí under the Non-Fatal Offences Against the Person Act, 1997. In cases where there is a breach of a Court Order (a Barring, Protection, Safety or Interim Barring order), the perpetrator can be arrested without a warrant and criminally prosecuted. In 1994 the Garda Síochána Policy on Domestic Violence Intervention was introduced (amended in 1997 – for details see Report of the Task Force on Violence Against Women, April 1997). If you are subjected to violence of any kind, you can contact the Garda Síochána for immediate help. The Garda Síochána is committed to a proactive policy in relation to protection through law enforcement (Garda Síochána Community Relations Section).

The Garda Síochána treats rape, sexual assault and other sexual offences as serious crimes. The laws governing such criminal offences are detailed in ‘The Legal Process and the Victims of Rape’ (The Dublin Rape Crisis Centre and The School of Law Trinity College, 1998). The Dublin Rape Crisis Centre provides support for survivors of sexual crime throughout the legal and court process (for further details see entry under Direct/Frontline Services).

If you are experiencing violence of any kind Gardaí can give you immediate protection, advice, and referral to other appropriate agencies. If you choose, a female Garda can be available to help and support you throughout this experience (Garda Síochána Community Relations Section). The Garda Síochána can be contacted at your local Garda station or District Garda station – 24 hours a day, 365 days a year:

Contact: 999 or alternatively 112.

The Garda Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Investigation Unit:

In 1993, a special unit, the Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Investigation Unit, was set up to oversee all cases of domestic violence and sexual assault in the Dublin Metropolitan Area. In 1997, the Investigation Unit was placed under the responsibility of the National Bureau of Criminal Investigation, giving it a countrywide brief.

The objectives of the Unit are:

- To overview all cases of domestic violence and sexual violence/assault, and to assist where necessary in the investigation of the more complex cases;
- To improve methods of investigation by training, advice and assistance;
- To liaise with statutory and non-statutory bodies and organisations which have a brief for sexual assault and domestic violence; and
- To make arrangements to perform its duties in tandem with Community Relations Section and Juvenile Liaison Officer personnel.

Because of the National nature of the Unit, the types of cases that get its attention are those national or international issues that relate to sexually related crimes and domestic violence. The Unit is directly involved only in the investigation of those cases to which special circumstances apply. All other cases are dealt with by personnel at the complainant's local Garda station.

To access the Unit:

Garda Domestic Violence and Sexual Assault Investigation Unit

Harcourt Square
Dublin 2.

Contact: By referral only through the complainant's local Garda station, where appropriate.

➤ LEGAL ADVICE AND LEGAL AID (REPRESENTATION) SERVICES:

Women experiencing violence may seek legal support (see Research Findings, Appendix A). This support can range from the provision of general information and advice on a woman's legal options, to the hiring of a solicitor and the presentation of her case in a District Court.

A number of the Direct/Frontline Services can provide legal information, and support women experiencing violence through both the legal and court process (for further information see the Direct/Frontline Services Section).

Legal Advice:

The following non-statutory services provide legal advice and general legal information on a wide variety of matters, including Family Law, although they do not operate a Legal Aid service. If you do require legal representation (a solicitor or barrister), you will be referred to Legal Aid services (see below for further details).

Legal Aid - Statutory:

The Legal Aid Board is a statutory body that provides legal aid and advice in civil cases to persons of moderate means/income. The Board makes the services of solicitors and, if necessary, barristers available to the above persons at a cost related to their income. Clients are means-tested, and in the majority of cases the contribution payable is a minimum contribution. To apply for legal aid and to find out if you are eligible to access this service, contact any of the Board's law centres, details of which are set out below, or contact the Board's Head Office at Quay Street, Cahirciveen, Co. Kerry.

Contact: (066)947 1000/Locall 1890 615 200

The Board provides its services through law centres and it also operates a scheme whereby applicants, who require remedies in the District Court for domestic violence, maintenance and/or custody/access, may be referred to a private solicitor to be chosen from a specially designated Legal Aid Board panel. An application for an Order must already have been made to the District Court before a client can access this Private Practitioner service. This service can be accessed via:

Private Practitioner Centre

Montague Court
Montague Street
Dublin 2

Contact: 01-477 6200

Applicants to law centres may be placed on a waiting list. Waiting periods vary from centre to centre. According to the Legal Aid Board, the length of time that clients generally wait before an appointment can be given has decreased over the last year. The law centres also operate a priority system for urgent cases. To find out approximately how long you might have to wait for an appointment, contact the Legal Aid Board Head Office or the law centre(s) operating in your region.

➤ PROBATION SERVICE:

The Probation Service provides a probation work and related service to the courts.

The work involves:

- Carrying out pre-sanction assessments for the courts;
- Supervising offenders in the community who are referred by the court;
- Supervising offenders under community service orders;
- Supervising offenders released conditionally from custody;
- Providing a counselling service to offenders and their families.

In working with offenders who have been convicted of crimes of violence against women, the service's intervention will focus on changing behaviour in a way that does not compromise the victim, and reduces the likelihood of further victimisation, while at all times holding the perpetrator accountable to the courts. In addition, this service is aware, from its assessment of offenders in general, that a propensity to or acts of violence against women can be a significant factor within the pattern of offending. Counselling which includes inputs on addiction, heightening personal responsibility for offending, and addressing the management of anger seeks to reduce the dangers to women and the likelihood of further offending.

Probation Officers are assigned to work in designated areas within the regions of the service. In the eastern region, Probation Officers can be contacted as follows:

National Domestic Violence Intervention Agency

The National Domestic Violence Intervention Agency (NDVIA) is funded by the Department of Justice, Equality and Law Reform. The NDVIA, for the first time in Ireland, aims to respond to domestic violence crime by focusing on both the victim and the perpetrator, within the context of the civil and criminal justice systems. The NDVIA is working with the key agencies – An Garda Síochána, the Courts, the Probation and Welfare Service, the Health Board – to coordinate the individual responses of each agency to domestic violence crime, and to integrate and inform their work with the crucial work of support services for victims. The NDVIA is running a pilot project in Dun Laoghaire, Co. Dublin, and Bray, Co. Wicklow.

The civil and criminal justice systems are responsible for protecting victims and sanctioning perpetrators of domestic violence crime. The NDVIA aims to ensure that victim safety and perpetrator accountability is maximised by institutionalising policies and practices in the civil and criminal justice systems and other key agencies.

➤ SERVICES FOR MALE PERPETRATORS OF VIOLENCE AGAINST WOMEN:

MOVE (Ireland)

MOVE is a facilitated self-help group set up to assist men to change their violent behaviour towards their partners and families. The aim of MOVE is ‘to intervene in the problem of domestic violence at the fundamental level of the perpetrator himself’ (Report of the Task Force on Violence Against Women, 1997). Its primary concern is the safety of women and children. It provides a thirteen-step facilitated programme in which between six and ten men participate. The programme is designed to engage men in taking responsibility for the violence they have inflicted on women and children. The abuser’s use of power and control is addressed and also the role of our culture in the support of male privilege and power in society at large. MOVE can help men to stop their violent behaviour by learning ways to express strong feelings safely and appropriately. All contact with the group is in confidence. MOVE can be contacted at the telephone number below to arrange an appointment:

➤ Information on the *Domestic Violence Act

• What Protection is available?

Physical or sexual violence against a family member is a crime. The Gardaí have the power to arrest and prosecute a violent family member.

Under the Domestic Violence Act there are two main kinds of protection available:

A Safety Order: This is an order of the Court which prohibits the violent person from further violence or threats of violence. It does not oblige the person to leave the family home. If that person lives apart from you, the order prohibits them from watching, or being in the vicinity of your home.

A Barring Order: This is an order which requires the violent person to leave the family home and prohibits them from re-entering it.

While you are waiting for the Court to decide on your application, the court can give you an immediate order called a Protection Order. This has the same effect as a Safety Order (described above). It is intended to last until the court decides on your case. In exceptional circumstances the Court can grant an Interim Barring Order which is an immediate order requiring the violent person to leave the family home. An Interim Barring Order can be made without notice to the violent person for a maximum period of 8 days. It can be renewed within the 8 day period but only if the violent person has been notified and given an opportunity to respond in Court.

• Who is Protected?

You can apply for protection under the Domestic Violence Act if you fall under any of the following categories:

Married Couples: a married person can apply for any of the above forms of protection against violence by their spouse.

Co-habiting Couples: where a couple are not married to each other but are living together, one partner can apply for protection against violence by the other partner. However, a court will not grant a safety order unless the cohabitees lived together for 6 months during the 12 month period before the application for protection was made. A court will not grant a barring order unless the cohabitees lived together for 6 months during the 9 month period before making the application. A barring order will not be made against a cohabitee who owns the place of residence or who has greater ownership rights than the cohabitee seeking protection.

Parents: a parent can apply for protection against domestic violence by their own child if the child is over 18. You can get a Barring Order unless the adult child owns the home in full, or has greater ownership rights than you do. You can also get a Safety Order even if a Barring Order is not available.

Others Living Together: you can apply for protection against violence by someone over 18 who you are living with if the court decides that your relationship is not primarily based on contract. For example, two relatives living together could be covered. If you come under this heading, the courts will be able to give you a Safety Order. You will not qualify for a Barring Order.

Children: you can apply for the above orders either because of violence towards you, towards your child, or towards a child who you are looking after. The HSE may, in special circumstances, seek protection on your behalf.

- How long will these Court Orders last?

In the District Court, a Safety Order can last up to 5 years, and a Barring Order up to 3 years. These Orders can be renewed.

- What happens if the Order is broken?

If you get a Court Order, and the violent person breaks it, this is a crime. The Gardaí have the powers to arrest and charge that person.
